sion have not favoured the proposal keeping in view the following:

(i) A large number of colleges and Universities in the country do their teaching mostly in Hindi. Besides existence of many distinguished School and Departments of Hindi in our major universities, Hindi is the subject in which perhaps the largest number of Ph.D. these are produced.

(ii) The very objectives of the proposed University would underplay some of those specialised areas like Departments of Science, Social Sciences, Humanities, etc.

(iii) The setting up of this University may further add to the number of unemployed, under-employed and unemployable youth in our country.

(iv) There may be further demands from various corners for setting up another 20 language universities, each of them ultimately of questionable value in higher education.

(v) The strengthening of languages is an important need but that can be done through strengthening of existing educational institutions.

(vi) An international platform for promotion of Hindi as a world language and for developing it as a means of strengthening bonds of friendship between India and other countries can be provided by different existing organisations.

The matter was further examined by the Govt. keeping in view, interalia, overall resources constraint and with particular reference to the Zero Base Budgeting proposed to be adopted in 1989. After review it was decided that the proposal may not be taken up for implementation for the present. Hence the same has been kept pending.

Following steps are being taken to disseminate advanced knowledge and understanding of Hindi as an international language:

(i) Teaching of Hindi to non-Hindi speaking Indians as well as foreigners through correspondence courses by Central Hindi Directorate (CHD.), a subordinate office under the Department of Education.

(ii) Preparation of bilingual dictionaries, conversational guides etc., in Indian languages including Hindi and foreign languages by CHD under the Indo-foreign Cultural Exchange Programmes.

(iii) Under the scheme of Propagation of Hindi Abroad, foreign scholars are awarded scholarships for study of Hindi in the Central Institute of Hindi, New Delhi run by the Kendriya Hindi Shikshan Mandal Agra, an autonomous body under the Department of Education.

(iv) Hindi Teachers are deputed to foreign countries and Hindi books are distributed through our Embassies/Missions abroad.
